UPDATE

Dirty Trucks Decision a Win for Public Health

Dear Jessica,

We did it! Andrew Wheeler, acting administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has just announced that he won't follow former Administrator Scott Pruitt in giving super polluting trucks a temporary pass on pollution regulations.

This is an important victory for science-based decision making—and UCS supporters like you played a critical role.

More than 14,000 UCS supporters weighed in with acting Administrator Wheeler and pushed their legislators to pressure him to do the right thing—and it worked.

With new shiny shells but old dirty engines, these dirty trucks (or glider vehicles) only make up five percent of the freight fleet, but they emit a third of the pollution for ALL long-haul trucks. And the toxic pollution emitted from these vehicles could cause at least 1,600 premature deaths every year and is hundreds of times more pollution than from new trucks. It's safe to say that this is a win for public health—especially for folks who live in proximity to trucking

A Win Against Dirty Trucks

More than 14,000 UCS supporters weighed in with acting EPA Administrator Wheeler and told him to do the right thing on dirty trucks...and it worked!

We still have work to do to keep these trucks off our roads, but for now, let's savor this victory!

corridors.

We may have won this battle, but we aren't completely out of the woods just yet. The rule to limit the pollution from these vehicles is still under threat, but acting Administrator Wheeler has the power to do the right thing. We'll be looking to UCS supporters like you to help us push him to, once and for all, kill these dirty trucks. But for now, let's savor this victory and celebrate!

Thank you for all your support. We won this together.

Sincerely,
